IRG Center for Structural Medicine Welcomes Vicki Luebbe, PT, FAAOMPT.

Ballard, Washington – May 7, 2019 – This week IRG Center for Structural Medicine in Ballard welcomed Vicki Luebbe, PT, FAAOMPT, rounding out their holistic therapy with noteworthy Physical Therapy (PT) expertise. Luebbe brings over 40 years of PT experience with top-notch credentials, including a residency, fellowship, and doctorate in Orthopedic Manual Physical Therapy from the Ola Grimsby Institute (OGI).

Luebbe's training and experience enable her to not only help countless individuals recover from injury, she also helps other therapists learn and develop their clinical skills. Luebbe currently serves as the OGI's Vice President and has instructed in its residency and fellowship programs for the last 13 years. Luebbe also holds certificates in manual therapy and sports medicine. She is a Fellow in the American Academy of Orthopedic Manual Physical Therapists and a 40-year member of the American Physical Therapy Association where she belongs to several special interest sections including sports, orthopedic, foot/ankle, and hand.

"Providing individualized physical therapy to my patients is still exciting each and every day. I am passionate about the care I bring to the table; excited to interact with colleagues and clients, and love learning from both," Luebbe said.

IRG is thrilled to welcome Luebbe to The Center for Structural Medicine. The combination of physical and occupational therapy in one setting offers convenience and exceptional care to those seeking holistic or traditional therapy in Ballard.

IRG Center for Structural Medicine is located at 2821 NW Market Street in Ballard. Check out IRGPT.COM for more details.
