IRG Physical & Hand Therapy Celebrates Move to New Spokane Location
IRG Physical Therapy - Spokane Welcomes Patients at New Shadle Park Clinic

SPOKANE, Wash., August 30, 2021: IRG Physical & Hand Therapy recently reopened the doors of its Spokane clinic after moving to a new location in July of 2021. Once located in the Parkside area of the city, the clinic now resides in the Shadle Park neighborhood.

IRG Physical Therapy – Spokane provides care for patients of all ages in an outpatient, fitness-oriented setting. The clinic prides itself on providing care for Spokane’s aging population, including those who have been diagnosed with Parkinson’s disease. Specialized therapy services include strengthening and endurance programs, fall prevention and training for those with movement impairments.

Of the clinic’s relocation, IRG Physical Therapy – Spokane Clinic Director Cody Kenison said, “The move to a new location is an exciting new adventure for our IRG clinic. We are looking forward to treating individuals in the Shadle Park area and continuing to care for the greater Spokane region.”

Additionally, IRG Physical & Hand Therapy CEO Shannon O’Kelley said, “Our strength has always been our relationships with the community that our clinics are in. At IRG, our focus is to be your family’s physical therapist, your community’s physical therapist and your neighborhood physical therapy group. We are looking forward to providing great physical therapy services, along with prevention, wellness and education opportunities for the entire family and community.”

IRG Physical Therapy – Parkside is now accepting new patients at 223 W. Wellesley Ave. Building A, Spokane, WA 99205. The clinic offers specialized services in spine rehabilitation, pre- and post-surgical rehabilitation, sports injury rehabilitation and more. Interested patients can contact (509) 323-0066 to book an appointment, schedule a free injury screen or request further information.
